

CRS Report for Congress

Received through the CRS Web

Secret Sessions of the House and Senate

Mildred Amer
Specialist in American Government
Government and Finance Division

“Secret,” or “closed,” sessions of the House and Senate exclude the press and the public. They are held to discuss business such as Senate deliberations during impeachment trials, issues of national security, and sensitive communications received from the President, all deemed to require confidentiality and secrecy. During a secret session, the doors of the chamber are closed. The chamber and its galleries are cleared of all individuals except Members and those officers and employees specified in the rules or essential to the session. Secret sessions occur infrequently. Any Member of Congress may request one, although there is usually agreement in advance among Members. For a longer discussion of secret sessions, see CRS Report RS20145, Secret Sessions of Congress: A Brief Historical Overview, by Mildred Amer. For more information on the legislative process, see [<http://www.crs.gov/products/guides/guidehome.shtml>].

Authority in the Constitution and Rules

Authority for the House and Senate to hold secret sessions is implied by Article I, section 5, of the Constitution which says: “Each House shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such parts as may in their judgment require secrecy...” Both chambers have supplemented this clause through rules and precedents. However, all of a chamber’s normal rules of debate apply during secret sessions, except during impeachment deliberations in the Senate.

In the House, Rule XVII, clause 9, governs secret sessions, including the types of business to be considered behind closed doors. A motion to resolve into a secret session may only be made in the House, not in Committee of the Whole. A Member who offers such a motion announces the possession of confidential information, and moves that the House go into a secret session. The motion is not debatable, but if agreed to, the Member making the motion is recognized under the one-hour rule in closed session.

For Senate impeachment proceedings, Rules XX and XXIV of the Senate Rules for Impeachment Trials govern secret deliberations. The Senate has interpreted these rules to require closed deliberations during impeachment trials. Standing Senate Rules XXI, XXIX, and XXXI cover secret sessions for legislative and executive business (nominations and treaties). Rule XXI calls for the Senate to close its doors once a motion is made and seconded. The motion is not debatable, and its disposition is made behind closed doors. Rule XXIX calls for Senate consideration of treaties to be conducted in secret unless a majority votes to lift the “injunction of secrecy,” which it usually does.

Rule XXXI mandates that all nominations be considered in open session unless the Senate votes to do so in secret.

History and Current Practice

The Continental Congress and the Constitutional Convention met in secret. The Senate met in secret until 1794, its first rules reflecting a belief that the body's various special roles, including providing advice and consent to the executive branch, compelled it to conduct its business behind closed doors. The Senate's executive sessions (to consider nominations and treaties) were not opened until 1929.

Since 1929, the Senate has held 54 secret sessions, generally for reasons of national security. On November 1, 2005, the Senate met behind closed doors to discuss Iraq war intelligence. Six of the seven most recent secret sessions, however, were held during the impeachment trial of President Bill Clinton. Four of those sessions were in February 1999 during the final impeachment deliberations. Two were in January 1999 to discuss a motion to end the trial and another motion to call witnesses.¹ In 1997, the Senate met in secret to consider the Chemical Weapons Convention Treaty, and in 1992, to debate the "most favored nation" status of China. The Senate also closed its doors during the impeachment trial of a federal judge in 1933 and on six occasions while considering impeachment articles against three other federal judges in the 1980s.

The House met frequently in secret session through the end of the War of 1812; then, only in 1825 and in 1830. Since 1830, the House has met behind closed doors only three times: in 1979 to discuss the Panama Canal, in 1980 to discuss Central American assistance, and in 1983 to discuss U.S. support for paramilitary operations in Nicaragua.

Members and staff of both houses are prohibited from divulging information from secret sessions, and all staff are sworn to secrecy. Violations of secrecy are punishable by the disciplinary rules of a chamber. A Member may be subject to a variety of punishments, including loss of seniority, fine, reprimand, censure, or expulsion. An officer or employee may be fired or subject to other internal disciplinary actions.

Transcripts

The proceedings of a secret session are not published unless the relevant chamber votes, during the meeting or at a later time, to release them. Then, those portions released are printed in the Congressional Record.

If the House decides not to release a transcript, it is ultimately transferred to the clerk of the House for transmittal to the Archivist of the United States for preservation at the National Archives and Records Administration. The transcripts may be made available to the public after 30 years (Rule VII, clause 3).

¹ On Jan. 8, 1999, the Senate Democratic and Republican Conferences held a rare joint, secret meeting in the old Senate chamber to discuss the procedure for the pending impeachment trial of the President, but this was not a formal, secret session of the Senate.

If the Senate does not approve release of a secret session transcript, the transcript is stored in the Office of Senate Security and ultimately sent to the National Archives and Records Administration. The proceedings remain sealed until the Senate votes to remove the injunction of secrecy.

CRS Report for Congress

Received through the CRS Web

Secret Sessions of Congress: A Brief Historical Overview

Mildred Amer
Specialist in American National Government
Government and Finance Division

Summary

“Secret” or “closed door” sessions of the House of Representatives and Senate are held periodically to discuss business, including impeachment deliberations, deemed to require confidentiality and secrecy. Authority for the two chambers to hold these sessions is implied by Article I, Section 5, of the Constitution. Both the House and the Senate have supplemented this clause through rules and precedents.

Although secret sessions were common in Congress’s early years, they were less frequent through the 20th century. National security is the principal reason for such sessions in recent years. Members and staff who attend these meetings are prohibited from divulging information. Violations are punishable by each chamber’s disciplinary rules. Members may be expelled and staff dismissed for violations of the rules of secrecy. Transcripts from secret sessions are not published unless the relevant chamber votes to release them during the session or at a later time. The portions released then may be printed in the Congressional Record.

This report will be revised when either house holds another secret session or amends its rules for these meetings.

Introduction

“Secret,” or “closed,” sessions of the House and Senate exclude the press and the public. These sessions are used for Senate deliberations during impeachment trials, as well as to discuss issues of national security, confidential information, and sensitive communications received from the President. During a secret session, the doors of the chamber are closed, and the chamber and its galleries are cleared of all individuals except Members and those officers and employees specified in the rules or essential to the session. Secret sessions occur infrequently and have been held more often in the Senate than the House. Any Member of Congress may request a secret session, although there is usually agreement in advance among Members of both parties before one calls for a closed session.¹

Authority in the Constitution and Rules

Authority for the House and Senate to hold secret sessions is implied by Article I, Section 5, of the Constitution, which states: “Each House shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such parts as may in their judgment require secrecy....” Both chambers have supplemented this clause through rules and precedents. All the normal rules of debate apply during secret sessions in the House and Senate except during impeachment deliberations in the Senate.

In the House, Rule XVII, clause 9, governs secret sessions, including the types of business to be considered behind closed doors.² A motion to resolve into a secret session may only be made in the House, not in Committee of the Whole. A Member who offers such a motion announces the possession of confidential information, and moves that the House go into a secret session. The motion is not debatable, but if agreed to, the Member making the motion is recognized under the one-hour rule in closed session. In addition, under Rule X, clause 11(D-F), the House Select Committee on Intelligence may move that the House hold a secret session to determine whether classified information held by the committee should be made public.

For Senate impeachment proceedings, Rules XX and XXIV of the Senate Rules for Impeachment Trials govern secret deliberations. The Senate has interpreted these rules to require that deliberations be closed during impeachment trials.³

Standing Senate Rules XXI, XXIX, and XXXI cover secret sessions for legislative and executive business (nominations and treaties).⁴ Rule XXI calls for the Senate to close its doors once a motion is made and seconded. The motion is not debatable, and its disposition is made behind closed doors. Rule XXIX calls for Senate consideration of treaties to be conducted in secret unless a majority votes to lift the “injunction of secrecy,” which it usually does. Rule XXXI mandates that all nominations be considered in open session unless the Senate votes to do so in secret.

¹ On Nov. 1, 2005, Senate Democrats compelled a closed session with no advanced notice. See Charles Babington and Dafna Linzer, “Senate Democrats Force Closed Meeting,” Washington Post, Nov. 2, 2005, pp. A1,A4.

² For additional information, see William Holmes Brown, House Practice, A Guide to the Rules, Precedents, and Procedures of the House (Washington: GPO, 1996), pp. 421-424.

³ For the 1805 impeachment trial of Supreme Court Associate Justice Samuel Chase, the Senate decided that “At all times whilst the Senate is sitting upon the trial of an impeachment, the doors of the Senate Chamber shall be kept open.” See “Trial of Judge Chase,” Annals of Congress, 8th Cong., 2nd sess., Dec. 24 and 31, 1804, p. 92.

⁴ For additional information, see U.S. Congress, Senate, Riddick’s Senate Procedure, Precedents and Practices, S.Doc. 101-28, 101st Cong., 2nd sess. (Washington: GPO, 1992), pp. 275-281, 876.

History and Current Practice

Both the Continental Congress and the Constitutional Convention met in secret. The Senate met in secret until 1794, its first rules reflecting a belief that the body's various special roles, including providing advice and consent to the executive branch, compelled it to conduct its business behind closed doors. The Senate's executive sessions (to consider nominations and treaties) were not opened until 1929.

Since 1929, the Senate has held 54 secret sessions, generally for reasons of national security. Six of the seven most recent secret sessions, however, were held during the impeachment trial of President William Clinton. Two of those sessions were in January 1999 to discuss a motion to end the trial and another motion to call witnesses.⁵ Four were in February 1999 during the final impeachment deliberations.⁶

Two of the Senate's secret meetings have been held in the old Senate chamber because its lack of electronic equipment is thought to enhance security. One session was in 1988 to discuss the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Force Missiles Treaty, and the other was in 1992 to debate the "most favored nation" status of China. See Table 1 for a complete list of the 54 secret sessions held by the Senate since 1929.

The House met frequently in secret session through the end of the War of 1812; mainly to receive confidential communications from the President, although also for routine legislative business. Subsequent secret meetings were held in 1825 and in 1830. Since 1830, the House has met behind closed doors only three times: in 1979, 1980, and 1983.⁷ Table 2 identifies the secret House sessions beginning in 1825.

Members and staff of both houses are prohibited from divulging information from secret sessions, and all staff are required to sign an oath of secrecy. Violations of secrecy

⁵ On Jan. 8, 1999, the Senate Democratic and Republican Conferences held a rare joint, secret meeting in the old Senate chamber to discuss the procedure for the pending impeachment trial of the President, but this was not a formal, secret session of the Senate. See Peter Baker and Helen Dewar, "Senate Votes Rules for President's Trial; Proceedings to Begin Next Week," Washington Post, Jan. 9, 1999, p. A1.

⁶ Prior to going into the first of the four closed-door deliberations during the impeachment trial of President Clinton, the Senate agreed to a motion to allow any Senator to insert in the Congressional Record, at the conclusion of the trial, his or her statements made in closed session on the Articles of Impeachment. See "Motion Relating to Record of Proceedings Held in Closed Session," Congressional Record, vol. 145, Feb. 9, 1999, pp. 2054-2055.

⁷ On July 27, 1998, the House had a secret briefing from law enforcement officials in the House chamber to receive information related to the shooting of two Capitol police officers on July 24, 1998. On Mar. 18, 1999, the House had another closed meeting to discuss "highly classified material relating to the emerging ballistic missile threat to the U.S." This meeting was not considered a "secret session," because it was conducted by a former Secretary of Defense who was the chair of the Commission to Assess the Ballistic Missile Threat to the United States. After the meeting, the House convened to consider legislation to deploy a national missile defense. The session was for Members only and was conducted at the "top secret classification level." Source: "Dear Colleague" letter from the Speaker of the House, dated Mar. 15, 1999, and conversations with the office of the House Parliamentarian.

are punishable by the disciplinary rules of a chamber. A Member may be subject to a variety of punishments, including loss of seniority, fine, reprimand, censure, or expulsion. An officer or employee may be dismissed or subject to other internal disciplinary actions.

Transcripts

The proceedings of a secret session are not published unless the relevant chamber votes, during the meeting or at a later time, to release them. Then, those portions released are printed in the Congressional Record.

If the House decides not to release the transcript of a secret session, the Speaker refers the proceedings to the appropriate committee(s) for evaluation. The committees are required to report to the House on their ultimate disposition of the transcript. If a committee decides not to release the transcript, it becomes part of the committee's noncurrent records (pursuant to House Rule VII, clause 3) and is transferred to the clerk of the House for transmittal to the Archivist of the United States at the National Archives and Records Administration. Transcripts may be made available to the public after 30 years unless the Clerk of the House determines that such availability "would be detrimental to the public interest or inconsistent with the rights and privileges of the House" (Rule VII, clause 3).

If the Senate does not approve release of a secret session transcript, the transcript is stored in the Office of Senate Security and ultimately sent to the National Archives and Records Administration. The proceedings remain sealed until the Senate votes to remove the injunction of secrecy.

Table 1. Closed Senate Sessions Since 1929

Date	Reason for the Session
May 24, 1933	Judge Harold Louderback impeachment trial deliberations
February 10, 1934	Investigations of air and ocean mail contracts involving William P. McCracken, Jr., et al.
February 13-14, 1934	Contempt proceedings against William P. McCracken, Jr., et al.
April 15-16, 1936	Judge Halsted Ritter impeachment trial deliberations
June 26, 1942	Naval policies on building battleships and aircraft carriers
October 7-8, 1943	Reports from the war fronts
April 11, 1963	Nike-Zeus anti-missile program
July 14, 1966	Resolution creating a Committee on Intelligence Operations; security agency oversight
October 2, 1968	Defense Department appropriations; anti-ballistic missile system

Date	Reason for the Session
July 17, 1969	Military procurement authorizations; anti-ballistic missile system
December 15, 1969	Defense Department appropriations
September 10, 1970	Proposed legislative program for the second session of the 91 st Congress
December 18, 1970	Discussion of certain legislation to be completed before the sine die adjournment of the 91 st Congress
June 7, 1971	United States involvement in Laos
May 2-4, 1972	Discussion of the release of a classified National Security Council memorandum (two sessions on May 2, 1972)
September 25, 1973	Defense procurement authorization program; Trident submarine program
June 10, 1974	Defense procurement authorization; funds for the "counterforce" capability program
June 4, 1975	Military procurement authorization; U.S. strategic missiles
November 20, 1975	Report from the Senate Select Committee to Study Governmental Operations with Respect to Intelligence Activities; alleged assassination plots involving foreign leaders
December 17-18, 1975	Department of Defense appropriations; Angola
July 1, 1977	Funding for neutron bombs
February 21-22, 1978	Panama Canal treaties
May 15, 1978	Proposed military aircraft sales to Egypt, Israel, and Saudi Arabia
September 21, 1979	Mobilization of U.S. forces; military preparedness
February 1, 1980	Armed forces personnel management legislation
May 4, 1982	Defense Department authorizations; United States-USSR capabilities
February 16, 1983	Nominations of Richard R. Burt and Richard T. McCormack to be Assistant Secretaries of State
April 26, 1983	Nicaragua
February 1, 1984	President's report to Congress on Soviet compliance with various arms control agreements
June 12, 1984	Omnibus defense authorizations; anti-satellite (ASAT) missiles
October 7-9, 1986	Judge Harry Claiborne impeachment trial deliberations (two closed sessions on October 7, 1986)

Date	Reason for the Session
March 29, 1988	Intermediate-Range Nuclear Force (INF) Missiles Treaty (held in the old Senate chamber)
March 16, 1989, and October 19, 1989	Judge Alcee Hastings impeachment trial deliberations
November 2, 1989	Judge Walter Nixon impeachment trial deliberations
February 25, 1992	Most favored nation status for China (held in old Senate chamber)
April 24, 1997	Chemical Weapons Convention
January 25-26, 1999	Discussion of procedures for the impeachment trial of President William Clinton
February 9-12, 1999	President William Clinton impeachment trial deliberations
November 1, 2005	Iraq war intelligence

Source: Senate Historical Office, Senate Library, and Robert C. Byrd, “Closed Sessions of the Senate Since 1929,” in The Senate 1789-1992; Historical Statistics 1789-1992, S.Doc. 100-20, 100th Cong., 1st sess. (Washington: GPO, 1993), pp. 470-472.

Note: Prior to a 1929 rule change, executive sessions were routinely held behind closed doors.

Table 2. Closed House Sessions Since 1812

Date	Reason for the Session
December 27, 1825	To receive a confidential message from the President regarding relations with Indian tribes ^a
May 27, 1830	To receive a confidential message from the President on a bill regulating trade between the U.S. and Great Britain ^b
June 20, 1979	Panama Canal Act of 1979; implementing legislation
February 25, 1980	Cuban and other Communist-bloc countries involvement in Nicaragua
July 19, 1983	U.S. support for paramilitary operations in Nicaragua

Sources: William Holmes Brown, “Consideration and Debate,” in House Practice, A Guide to the Rules, Precedents, and Procedures of the House of Representatives (Washington: GPO, 2003), pp. 440-442; “Closed House Session,” Congressional Quarterly Almanac (Washington: Congressional Quarterly, Inc., 1979), p. 149; and “Closed House Session,” Congressional Quarterly Almanac (Washington: Congressional Quarterly, Inc., 1980), p. 334.

Notes: Prior to 1812, the House met frequently in closed session.

a. A. Hinds, Hind’s Precedents of the House of Representatives, vol. v (Washington: GPO, 1907), p. 1108.

b. “Secret Sitting,” Debates in Congress, vol. 51, May 28, 1830, p. 1139.